Weekly Inspirational Corner

(Sponsored by an Irma Times reader)

For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so they also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that they which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout with the trumpet of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words.—1 Thessalonians 4:14-18.

WITH THE District Agriculturist

By J. S. Duncan

Start Plants Now

Seeds planted indoors have a start of several weeks over those planted in the garden. Several vegetables and flowers benefit from early starting. Among these are cauliflower, cabbage, broccoli, tomatoes, lettuce, cucumber and pumpkin, also snapdragons, dahlias, stocks and marigolds. The last week of March or first week of April is the best time to start. Plants in pots or flats in a sunny window, greenhouse or hotbed. When the young plants have their first true leaves they should be pricked out and transplanted to other flats and set about two inches apart. When danger of frost is past these plants can be hardened off and transplanted into the garden.

Fertilizer Recommendations

The pamphlet "Fertilizer Recommendations for Alberta (1959)" is one that every farmer should look through. It is available from this office. Even better would be for every farmer to have a sample of his soil tested to find out exactly what it requires. The Soil and Feed Testing Laboratory, University of Alberta does this work. Send samples to send samples in and information regarding taking samples are available from this office.

WARNING

The Veterinary Laboratory of the Alberta Department of Agriculture has issued a warning regarding use of iron injections for anemia in baby pigs. There are several injectable iron products on the market but the iron content varies and so do the instructions regarding second and succeeding injections. Some farmers have given one injection and had pigs die of anemia because the product they used was low in iron and needed extra iron. The trouble was not due to the product but to the fact that the farmers failed to read and follow the instructions on the product he used. Always read and follow the instructions on the container.

NEWS FROM THE JACKSONS'

We spent one very interesting day at Marineland which is the only three-ring sea-circus in the world. It is situated on the ocean, midway between Redondo Beach and San Pedro—at the extreme southern end of Los Angeles County. Here we saw performances by trained seals, porpoises, and whales. We also saw a diver submerge in a tank containing 500,000 gallons of water and 150 species of fish which he feeds by hand. This operation can be viewed at three different levels of the tank, through glass panels. It was rather an unusual sight to see the diver hand-feeding a blue shark.

The view, from the top of the Oceanarium from which the blue Pacific, the cliffs and the mountains can be viewed is most exhilarating, and one not easily forgotten.

We spent one weekend in the city of Compton with our old friends from Peace River, Ray and Mrs. Hawley. Compton is located between Long Beach and Los Angeles. In fact, it is difficult to discern where one city ends and the other begins. While there we looked up some other friends, amongst them Bill Simmons from Sedgewick who is spending the winter with his daughter, Mrs. Ray O'Connor in Los Angeles. We called up Mrs. Burrell's nephew, Dr. Comer, on three different occasions but were unable to contact him. Evidently, he was away from home. We did contact Miss Rosemarie Erickson, who is a grand-niece of Mrs. Jennie Peterson and cousin of Mrs. A. C. Archibald. We had a long telephone conversation with this lady just before we left Compton—she had been away from home over the weekend; otherwise we would have been able to meet her in person.

We visited Forestlawn Memorial Cemetery at Los Angeles and drove all over the main parts of Long Beach, Los Angeles, Compton, Redondo Beach and San Pedro. We also visited Newport, Laguna Beach, etc., splashed in the water and gathered sea shells along the beach.

On Feb. 16, we left Compton and headed north in a steady down-pour of rain—our bus splashed through a foot and more of water as we came through the Angeles. After about two and a half hours the rain let up and the sun came out as we went through the mountains. At one point, the mountain tops were covered with snow. South of Bakersfield, the country is level and wide open. Here we ran into a dust storm which was nearly as bad as some we've seen around Irma. It was so bad the previous day that the highway was closed.

On the 22nd, we drove down to San Francisco and climbed Mount Tamalpais which rises to a height of 2655 ft. The view from here was enchanting—to the east and south of it lay San Francisco, east lay the Golden Gate Bridge, beyond it in the bay nestled Alcatraz, east and north lay San Rafael, Mill Valley and other small towns sprawled in the valley and continuing up the hill sides and to the west sparkled the blue Pacific as far as the eye could see. Leaving the mountains, we went to Muir Woods which is a national nesting in a valley between two mountains where we admired the splendid growth of Redwood trees and growths. Here we had lunch and signed the register and again saw the names of quite a few Canadians come of whom were undoubtedly in the park while we were as we saw several Alberta licenses in the parking area. From the park we drove into San Francisco over the Golden Gate Bridge which with its approaches is over 7 miles long then toward the city, including Chinatown. We spent an hour or more driving through the Golden Gate park which is very beautiful. This was a holiday, being Washington's birthday, and the crowds were so dense, that in spite of the immensity of the park, it was difficult to get around and at many places we saw traffic being handled by mounted police.

Finally, we arrived at the ocean. Here we spent some time watching huge breakers rushing into shore. In the park

MELINDA'S MAGIC NIGHT

Illustrations by Fenny Wilson

Melinda was almost finished. She had been busy for a long time, and her tongue had been busy too, moving along with her pencil. She was writing a tiny, tiny letter. She was most careful with it, for it was a special letter. Melinda had thought that she should write it on a rose petal, but no matter how gentle she was, she couldn't help tearing the soft flower page. So she now was using a little piece of pale blue paper which had been wrapped around her birthday gift.

This pretty note was for the Fairy Queen. Melinda had heard so many wonderful tales of the fairies and their affairs, that she decided it was time to repay them for her enjoyment.

So now in front of her rested a pile of things which Melinda hoped a Fairy Queen would like to have.

There was a smooth round golden ball, which Melinda had rolled out of papers from a box of chocolates. There was a short piece of frilly white lace, which Melinda's Grandma had given her from the sewing basket. And a square of rich crimson velvet, too. And a sparkly star earring, the mate to one her Mamma had worn.

One day in the garden, a soft yellow feather had drifted down to Melinda, like a kiss, from a darting bird. It was softer than anything she had ever before touched, and she was sure the fairies could use it for something.

From Melinda's birthday cake, there were three colored candy balls, which Melinda had saved. Surely fairies would enjoy candy just as little girls did!

And last of all, there was a jaunty blue elephant which had broken off Melinda's brooch. She wasn't too sure what use this would be to the Queen, but it was so odd and pretty she felt it was a suitable offering.

Now Melinda wrapped the three wax candles in a big red poppy petal, tying it with a bit of tinsel. She wasn't very good at tying knots, but she wound the tinsel round and round and hoped for the best. The crimson velvet and frilly lace were folded neatly. The bright feather was dusted off and smoothed out; the elephant stood guard on stout blue legs.

After these preparations, Melinda tenderly packed her precious articles into half an Easter egg shell—a deep purple shell with shining dust on it. The letter she laid on top, so the fairies would be sure to know these things were for them.

Here is what Melinda's letter said:

Dear Queen:

I have heard lots of nice stories about you and I want to send these presents to tell you thank you. My name is Melinda and I hope the presents are not too heavy. I hope my letter is not too long to read.

Love, Melinda.

After thinking deeply for a few moments, Melinda decided on a place to leave her package. She tip-toed into the front room, stood on a round green stool, and tucked the purple shell behind the shining brass vase on the piano.

Then she skipped up to the kitchen in answer to Mother's voice calling, "Supper!"

Later, after kissing her Mummy and peeking at her Grandma, she snuggled cozily into her bed. She was just wondering if the fairies would find her gifts that night, or between the time when she was something glowing in the foot of her bed. Peeking around a bump of pink blanket, she found it was the shell!

It was shiner than it had ever been before, even though it was dark in the room. And now Melinda could see why—it was fastened in the long silver hair of the littlest lady Melinda had ever imagined. For a moment Melinda could do nothing but gaze at the hair—her Grandma's hair was silver too, but Melinda was sure it did not glow in the dark like this. But when the tiny lady spoke, Melinda looked more closely at her.

"So you are the sweet child who has chosen such delightful gifts for me. Yes, for me, dear Melinda. Don't look so surprised; I really am the Queen of the Fairies. And very few of the children who enjoy the fairy tales, ever say thank you. Because of your kindness, I have decided to let you see things which only a small number of lucky humans ever view. Come, my dear, smile for me!"

At that moment Melinda did more than smile, she chuckled aloud, for she noticed that instead of the Queen having a coach drawn by milk-white steeds, as Melinda's books said, there, hunched to the purple eggshell, the tiny blue elephant was patiently waiting. Just as if this had always been his job, and not being pinned onto a coat, at all!

She scrambled down the bed for a better look, and was helped into the shell by the Queen's dainty hand. It was very strange, but all at once Melinda was the right size to sit beside the beautiful shining lady, and yet she hadn't felt herself change. They sat comfortably on the plushy red velvet, and the elephant moved forward.

Surprisingly, he didn't plop across the bed, but began to float along a moon path, out the window to the garden. Melinda was just admiring the flight of the wingless creature, when he lighted on the cool grass.

Many musical voices greeted them, but Melinda did not understand them. Only the Queen had the power of speaking to human children.

As they stepped down, the Queen tossed her cloak around her shoulders. The little girl was pleased, for it was the very piece of lace she had set out, and the Fairy tied it around her neck with the bit of tinsel.

The other fairies were arrayed in various soft colors, and the elves wore suits so much like Melinda's own pyjamas, that she wasn't a bit bashful.

The Queen called to a yellow-clad elf with merry brown eyes and a grin so friendly that he made Melinda feel welcome even without words.

"This is Mikel, who found your gifts and hurried to tell me. He is a good elf, but somehow if there is any mischief done, Mikel is nailing up in it. He will help you feel at home here tonight, for we sometimes tell him he is so clumsy as to be almost human." Queen Mirabel laughed with a delicious tinkly laugh that Melinda had to laugh too, and Mikel didn't mind. The Queen went on, "Do you know, he even lost the letter you wrote me, when I sent him on ahead with it."

Mikel wrinkled his nose, winked and took Melinda's hand, leading her around the circle until she had received a smile from each guest. Then the Queen lightly tossed the golden ball high in the air, and Mikel caught it, thus beginning the strangest game of catch Melinda had ever seen. Sometimes a fairy would dart up and stand in the air above the ball, and yet manage to catch it—a few balanced airily on grass stems—others easily caught the ball although they were standing on their heads. Next, an unusual game of hide and seek. Melinda and Mikel hid in the fragrant center of a white lily, or under a peony leaf, or in the shadow of a pebble, or between the time of the garden fork standing in the rich earth.

Once they skipped along a cobweb, till a great brown spider crossed chased them away. They slid down the slippery stem in the lily pond and played peek-a-boo with the lazy old goldfish.

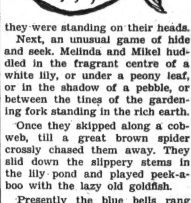

Presently the blue bells rang and the players gathered in the fairy ring at the end of the lawn. This was a little brown circle in the green of the grass, where Melinda's Grandma laughingly said the wee folk danced. If only she could see, Melinda smiled to herself.

The twinkling circle whirled till Melinda's head was spinning. She looked away and laughed in delight to see an old gnome in a purple cap, busy brushing down the elephant, with—the yellow gift feather!

When the insect band stopped for refreshments, Melinda was placed next to the Queen. Such amazing goodies were laid on a gossamer cloth. Honeyed flower petals, bright berries, and many delicious things which Melinda couldn't possibly name, for they were from a fairy kitchen. Each guest had a miniature crystal goblet, kept brim full of dew drops.

Last of all in a rosy bowl, were the three candles which Melinda had given, and everyone had a tiny bit.

It was all so tempting that I'm afraid Melinda was just a little greedy. But how could she help it!

Then Melinda noticed that the twinkling scene was blurring into one shiny mass, and far away she heard the Queen's kind voice, "Mikel, I will trust you to see this child safely home. I must say and see that we leave no signs of our merriment to betray us to the humans. Take care, now!"

And the next thing Melinda saw, was her own pink bed, with the sunbeams dancing on it.

Sitting up, she wondered and wondered about her adventure. She wondered so long that Mamma came in to see if she was still sleeping, and Melinda told her all about it.

"Why, that was a lovely dream, wasn't it, dear? But only a dream, of course. Fairies and elves are only in stories and verses, you know. Or in beautiful dreams like yours. Now, jump up and dress, breakfast is ready!"

So Melinda slowly got up, and slowly dressed. Mamma must be right, of course, but it had all seemed so very real. And Mikel! He had been so nice—Melinda nearly became fearful to think he was not real, and she would never see him again.

Slowly she bent down to put on her sandals, and then she spied a familiar blue paper peeping from under her rug. She picked it up in amazement.

Barefoot she ran to the kitchen, nailing the little scrap—"But Mamma! Here's the—here's the letter I wrote for Queen Mirabel! The letter that Mikel lost! And it's a delicious up, as small as small! And it was under my rug, bewildered why at the grass stains on Melinda's bare feet. And she said in a puzzled voice, "Why, darling, I don't know what to think. Perhaps I should not be so sure that Fairies aren't real. I don't know what to think!"

But Melinda knows what she thinks, and I know what I think. What do you think?

MADELINE LEVASON

"THE HAVES AND HAVE-NOTS" A friend of mine thinks it is high time we stopped being worried about the spoiled young generation. Her Brownie pack of 24 little eight to 10-year-olds has convinced her there is nothing wrong with today's kids.

During the drama of the Springhill mining disaster, her charges expressed a desire to "do something" for the miners' little girls.

All TV addicts, they knew the details of the tragedy, and with Christmas approaching, were stricken at the thought of those who had "lost their Daddies."

Like a miniature Ladies' Aid, they made practical plans. They decided each would donate one of her own dolls; they would collect pieces and make new clothes for the dolls and they would forfeit their annual Christmas party and spend their tiny funds on the project.

Of course, they drummed up help from their parents. Daddies were roped into using their power tools to make cradles for the dolls.

Mothers had their sewing baskets raided and were recruited for cutting out and stitching.

Favorite dolls were donated to the cause; brought to a meeting of the pack they were hugged by their owners until the last minute and handed over with obvious reluctance.

After several industrious weeks, three large boxes were duly dispatched to the Springfield Brownie pack in time for Christmas. That

Much interest in May sale of purebreds

The Fourth Annual Bull Sale sponsored by the East Central Cattle Breeder's Association will be held May 16, 1959, at the Cattle Auction Mart, Hereford, Angus and Shorthorns will be represented as indications point to a strong entry this year. Great interest has been shown already by both the contributors and buyers of the coming sale. Entries close on March 16th and entry forms have already been mailed. Anyone wishing to contribute a purebred bull of the Beef grade is urged to get in contact with the secretary, M. Huston of Sibbald, Alta. This sale, as was the policy last year, will be under the Alberta Government Approval Policy. It is expected that there will be present at the sale a Selector from the Alberta Cattle Breeder's Association and a Selector from the Alberta Government. — The Hanna Herald and East Central Alberta News, Hanna, Alta.

was not the end of the project. Letters of thanks came back and pen pal friendships sprang up. Springfield Brownies wrote of collecting used clothing for needy families. My friend says her Brownies are full of plans. They too, are collecting clothing.

They are also earning their needlework badges by making simple blouses and skirts for the cause.

Alberta Legislature In Session

By Ken Mason

EDMONTON, Alta., March 20 — Social Crediters and Liberals joined forces in the Legislature last week to pass a harmless resolution everyone will favor and at the same time to embarrass the Conservatives.

The motion, introduced by Social Creditor Henry Ruste of Wainwright, put the House on record as asking Ottawa to help the provinces bear the cost of highway construction.

Liberals introduced an amendment which tacked on the request that Ottawa give immediate consideration to building another Trans-Canada Highway from Winnipeg to Vancouver via the Yellowhead Route.

The Liberals had no objections to the Social Credit resolution, and Social Crediters were in favor of the Liberal amendment. But the Progressive Conservatives had committed themselves to opposing the original Social motion.

For one thing, said Tory Leader Cam Kirby of Red Deer, federal aid for highways would mean increased taxes, and he didn't think the people of province would go for that.

So when the vote was called, it was 51 to 3. The three Tory members were the only ones who stood to vote against it. "Three blind mice," shouted a voice from the Social Credit side.

It's extremely doubtful if passage of the resolution will prod Ottawa into helping the provinces build roads. But it permitted members from all parties to spend an entire afternoon playing politics to their hearts' content on a harmless subject.

The government's provincial treasury branch operates under fire—again—as the House continued to plod slowly through the budget estimates.

Mr. Kirby charged that the branches are set up in such a way that they could be used to dispense political favors. He referred to the branches' lending program under which loans of more than $3,000 have to be approved by a cabinet committee.

This means, he said, that large loans can be approved by the political party in power. He referred to the branches' lending program under which loans of more than $3,000 have to be approved by a cabinet committee.

save the money it spends building new liquor stores.

The perennial CCF motion calling for public ownership of electric power generating and distribution facilities went down to defeat, as usual.

Stanley Ruzvicki, CCF'er from Vegreville, introduced the motion and it was seconded by Nick Dusheki, Willingdon. Industries and Labor Minister Raymond Rierson called it the CCF's "annual pilgrimage to the shrine of socialism."

The vote against public ownership of power was 39 to 6.

It gained unexpected support from four Liberals—Michael Macagnio, Luc La Biche, Alfred Mysyk, Redwater, Harold Tanner, Edmonton, and Mr. Desfosses.

As the week ended it appeared almost certain the House would be back in session after Easter. Hope was that the session could be wound up before Easter, but progress has been too slow.

Premier Manning was prepared to move that the House adjourn over the Easter weekend and start to work again on Tuesday of next week.

Members still must go through a mountain of legislation, although as yet there has been nothing too contentious in the government bills introduced.

Other highlights of the week: Opposition members attacked "wide powers" given to utility companies and government agencies to expropriate land. It drew from Premier Manning the announcement that an entirely new expropriation bill will be drawn up.

Members started a debate on civil defence, aimed at getting a clear picture of government planning to cope with the threat of missile attack.

The House learned that travelling expenses of provincial civil servants topped the $3,000,000 mark for the first time last year.

The government's program of aid to Metis colonies was attacked and termed inadequate.

A bill introduced by Lands and Forests Minister Willmore will reduce to $25 from the present $50 the minimum fine for illegally shooting or possessing game birds.

The Canadian Red Cross and the American Red Cross have a mutual agreement to supply free blood to tourists who may require blood transfusions while visiting in their neighboring nation.

Discussion ranged over a wide variety of subjects as the study of the budget estimates dragged on, and some interesting comments were made.

For example, some country members noted that the 1957 liquor plebiscite has made little difference to rural residents who still often have to travel long distances to reach government liquor stores.

A suggested solution came from J. Romeo Desfosses, Liberal member from Grouard who until this session had been the all-time champion silent man of the Legislature.

He said the government should license a "good store" in every town as a liquor board substitute. This way, he said, it would be more convenient for rural residents and the government would

JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES CONVENTION IN EDMONTON

Edmonton has been chosen as host city for the next three-day convention of Jehovah's Witnesses from Edmonton East to the Saskatchewan border.

Mr. R. Foster, of the Bruce congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, announced that plans are under way for all the local witnesses to attend this conference, described by him as "a most practical three-day training program."

"Jehovah's Witnesses are ordained as ministers," said Mr. Foster. "And in keeping with this, the convention theme 'Be a Teacher of the Good News' has been chosen."

"It is based on 2 Tim. 2:1, 2, a text which shows the great responsibility resting upon all true Christians," stated Mr. Foster.

"The well-known religious term 'gospel' means 'Good news,'" explained Mr. Foster, "and Jehovah's Witnesses feel they have the best news of the day—an earthly paradise under God's Kingdom."

"Certainly then, it behooves Jehovah's Witnesses to receive training on how to become better teachers of this Good News or Gospel," reasoned Mr. Foster.

"For this reason, the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, sponsors of the 3-day Edmonton convention has prepared an interesting and stimulating program," concluded Mr. Foster.

The convention has been set for April 3, 4, 5, and will be held in the Sales Pavilion at the Exhibition Grounds. It will have delegates from at least five Edmonton congregations and 8 rural congregations between Camrose and Wainwright.

Warning to Public Re Blind Campaign

Several Alberta communities have recently been canvassed by persons purportedly raising funds to aid the blind. Unfortunately, many citizens have contributed to this appeal, thinking that they were donating to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

CNIB conducts one campaign for funds annually in each community. This campaign is always conducted by well known residents of the community. The CNIB appeal is organized and conducted by the Order of the Royal Purple. CNIB is the only service agency having a general registry of sightless persons and providing a programme of services designed to assist them in overcoming all of the problems which confront them as a result of their blindness. Other agencies soliciting funds, allegedly for the welfare of the blind, are, at best, only duplicating a service which is already available through CNIB.

Order of the Royal Purple strongly urges the citizens of this community to carefully check the credentials of any person approaching them for a donation in aid of the blind. Service records and financial statements should be carefully studied before any donation is made.

The 100th anniversary of the birth of the Red Cross idea will be commemorated in 1959.

One of the problems in Decorating or Redecorating a room is in choosing curtains. Much of a room's charm comes from ATTRACTIVE window treatments. Certain points have to be kept in mind when choosing fabrics

1. A room looks smaller when draperies or curtains contrast with the walls. It looks larger if there is little contrast between treatment and walls.
2. Full draperies in contrasting color break the length of a long wall.
3. Deep valances break the height of a room.
4. Lightweight, fine-textured, small-patterned, or plain fabrics are in good proportion to small rooms.
5. Large rooms benefit from heavier materials, large patterns, and colors that contrast with the walls.

6. Rough-textured walls need heavy-textured materials, while smooth-surfaced and finer fabrics are more pleasing with smooth walls.

7. Too much pattern on walls and draperies makes the room seem smaller and may create confusion.

8. Enough plain surface is needed for rest—enough pattern for interest.

FOSTER MOTHER—Western Humane Society officials did mother collie dog, Lassie, a good turn when they rescued her from 11 Highway. Now Lassie is doing a good turn to eight-week-old part Labrador puppies and two kittens which were abandoned. Since the kittens and puppies were found, Lassie has the job of foster mother and she appears to be thriving on it. Jack Studholme of the Western Humane Society says the kittens dig into the dog food with as much appetite as the puppies.

COLLIE IS GOOD FOSTER MOTHER

On February 11, Lassie, a mother collie dog, and her seven pups were found abandoned in a snowy ditch east of Regina by Western Humane Society. One of the pups was frozen to death and all but two died later of exposure.

Later Western Humane Society discovered three kittens, their eyes still shut, left to die in a cardboard box on Wascana creek.

And in a snowbank by a railroad track behind Aberdeen Crescent they found eight shivering week-old puppies, part Labrador.

The abandoned animals were taken to Western Humane Society's shelter, located at the extreme west end of Seventh Avenue. Both kittens and puppies were soon under the care of their new foster mother, Lassie.

One of Lassie's foster kittens was found smothered to death, but the others are "doing fine," according to Jack Studholme of Western Humane Society.

Mr. Studholme says four of the puppies found are golden and four are black. Their own mother the society has been unable to locate so far.

Out of Lassie's own litter, only one pup remains with the society. The other now lives in a happy home with a loving family.

Since the discovery of the abandoned collies the society has been swamped with letters and telephone calls. Mr. Studholme reports. Letters and donations have come from Wyoming, Montana and the three prairie provinces. And the society has had a number of phone calls about the dogs every day. One woman recently sent three comforters for the pups, and a donation from an old-age pensioned couple has been received. One Sunday alone Mr. Studholme counted 350 people who came to visit Lassie and her family.

Mr. Studholme says that if Lassie's former owner cannot be traced, she will go to live at the country home of a nice, elderly couple.

Canada's Pacific coast Indians were divided into seven different language groups. All lived mainly on salmon and sea foods rather than on foods from the hunt.
